“ I know Marilynne and David Stewart through their lovely daughter Nicki. Nicki and I have children who are classmates in school and we have become friends around our kids.

I believe I met Marilynne sometime in the fall of 2009. My son, Hank, and her grandson, Stewie, were first graders at Virginia Reinhardt Elementary School here in Rockwall, TX. I'm pretty sure I met her at a school function. I remember being introduced to Stewie's grandparents and Marilynne said to me, with a wink and a sparkle in her eye, (not an exact quote but my best recollection) "You can call me Ga-ga, and I was Ga-ga long before Ga-ga was Ga-ga." 2009 was the year that Lady Gaga's "Born This Way" burned up the charts. I couldn't help but fall in love!

I never really knew Ga-ga all that well (she will always be "Ga-ga" to me, she wore the name so graciously) but would see her (along with David) at many school ceremonies, performances, graduations, birthday parties, Adorn shows, and Halloween parties. She would always seek me out and tell me something wonderful she noticed about my children. She was always kind, and proud, and sparkling. She was the most "put together" lady I have ever known.

My children were more than a little jealous that my mother couldn't be here for their milestone school events, but Stewie & Milo always had Ga-ga.

I was a Facebook friend of hers and enjoyed seeing her posts of her lovely gardens and plants, my goodness she had a green thumb! I also loved the many cute animal stories she posted.

It stands out in my memory that she contacted Nicki, upset over the passing of my dog Gilda, to come comfort me. She seemed to enjoy my posts about my kids and pets, and always had a plucky and kind remark.

She was a lovely lady, and a ferociously proud mother and grandmother.

She is missed.

“ To Dave, Dawn, Nicki and families. So very sorry for your loss. Marilynne was more than just a friend she was someone we knew was always going to be here for us, just like family. I feel blessed that I had the privilege of being her friend. Geraldine and David
